Valladolid

Encased between the two rivers, the village, of small dimensions (where, according to the people of the time, when the bread was expensive, there was hunger in Spain), it made a rectangle with several access doors: that of the Puente Mayor to the north, the one of the Campo Grande to the south, the one of Tudela to the east and the one of the Rinconada to the west "

El Hereje
1998
Miguel Delibes - Writer

"Between 1601 and 1606, in a unique case in the History of Spain, Valladolid replaced Madrid as the capital of the Kingdom. During that five-year period, the city had to face the complicated challenges demanded by its new rank and the parallel geostrategic reorganization of the State, such as the installation of the Court itself or the election of a Royal Palace that was lacking at that moment"

Los Reales Sitios vallisoletanos
Dossier Ciudades 2, 2016
Javier Pérez Gil - IUU UVA

Valladolid is a city in Spain and the capital of the autonomous community of Castile and León. It has a population of 300,000 people, making it Spain's 13th most populous municipality and northwestern Spain's biggest city. Its metropolitan area ranks 20th in Spain with a population of more than 420,000 people in 23 municipalities.

The city is situated at the confluence of the Pisuerga and Esgueva rivers, 15 km before they join the Duero, and located within five winegrowing regions: Ribera del Duero, Rueda, Toro, Tierra de León, and Cigales.

The city was briefly the capital of Habsburg Spain under Phillip III between 1601 and 1606, before returning indefinitely to Madrid. The city then declined until the arrival of the railway in the 19th century, and with its industrialisation into the 20th century.

The Old Town is made up of a variety of historic houses, palaces, churches, plazas, avenues and parks. Despite the damage to the old city by the 1960s economic boom, it still boasts a few architectural manifestations of its former glory. Some monuments include the unfinished Cathedral (designed by Juan de Herrera, architect of El Escorial); the Plaza Mayor (Main Square), which was the model for that of Madrid, and of other main squares throughout the former Spanish Empire; the National Sculpture Museum, next to the church of Saint Paul, which includes Spain's greatest collections of polychrome wood sculptures; or the Faculty of Law of the University of Valladolid, as well as the houses of José Zorrilla and Miguel de Cervantes which are open as museums.

Enjoy your visit!
